

WHABERMAN is an action-drenched adventure game that pits a man, a beast, and a cetacean against a grotesque civilization of giant aliens. Leroy Cunningham is a salt-of-the-earth American poultry farmer who lives with his wife and five kids in rural West Virginia. The Cunninghams are settin' down to Thanksgiving dinner and the excitement is palpable. Mrs. Cunningham has been slaving for hours over her masterpiece: a mouth-watering turducken (a chicken stuffed inside a duck, stuffed inside a turkey). Leroy is on his way back from the outhouse, when he is wrenched from gravity's bonds by a blinding beam of white light, and transported to an alien space-ship.

The incredulous farmer awakes in a giant tank of viscous goo. He's naked as a jay-bird and all trussed up with wires and tubes. Suspended next to him in larger tanks: a North American grizzly bear and a humpback whale. The unlikely trio have been abducted by a race of monstrous, tentacled fiends, who roam the galaxy in search of exotic culinary delights.

The future looks bleak for Leroy: the aliens are transporting him back to their homeworld, where he will be stuffed inside the grizzly bear, who will in turn be stuffed inside the humpback whale. This mammalian monstrosity will then be cooked to perfection, creating the universe's first "whaberman". Now, whale, bear, and man must put their differences aside and learn to work together if they have any hope of escaping their otherworldly captors. They'll have to shoot, maul, and swim their way through an inhospitable alien homeworld, and make it back to Earth... or die trying.
